

Beth Nicholls

At heart, Beth Nicholls is a wanderer, an adventurer, and a seeker of beauty. She has spent much of her life on the road, having lived, worked, and traveled in more than 50 countries on every continent. Beth founded Do What You Love to give creative women the tools and inspiration to do what they love for life with groundbreaking retreats and e-courses. She has been named one of the U.K.'s 16 Most Exciting Young Female Entrepreneurs by Marie Claire Magazine and was recently chosen as a finalist for the Digital Entrepreneur of the Year Awards 2012, in recognition of Do What You Love's pioneering online courses. Beth has a master's degree in Japanese and used to host her own TV show in Japan. She is a keen photographer and writer, and an emerging pattern designer. She also has a slight obsession with washi tape and beautiful paper, and she harbours a secret dream to launch her own stationery line. Beth has just returned from a six-month stay in Kyoto, Japan.
